Coat of arms of the Republic of Ireland

Ireland, officially the Republic of Ireland (Irish: Éire [eːɾʲə]), is a country in the north-west of the island of Ireland, in the British Isles. It shares a land border with Northern Ireland to the north-east, and is bordered by the Atlantic Ocean to the west and south. Ireland is the third largest island in Europe and the twenty-fourth largest island in the world. Its capital and most populous city is Dublin, on the east coast, and its population is about 5 million.

Ireland was inhabited long before the 12th century, when it was known to the Romans and early medieval scribes as a place of extreme wealth and power. Gaelic culture developed here, and Christianity was introduced from Roman Britain in the 5th century. Ireland was then a land of many petty kingdoms, but was invaded and settled in the 12th century by the Anglo-Normans, who brought with them the English language and English law. Ireland became a lordship under the Lordship of Ireland, which was a dependency of the Kingdom of England. In the 16th century, the Tudor conquest of Gaelic Ireland was completed, and the Protestant Ascendancy established English and Protestant institutions and culture in Ireland. Most of the island was granted to English and Scottish Protestant landowners, displacing the Gaelic Irish and Catholic majority to the west. Ireland became a kingdom in 1542 and was ruled as a separate kingdom in the Kingdom of Ireland, ruled by the Protestant Ascendancy. The Great Famine of the 1840s caused a drastic decline in the population of Ireland, which was exacerbated by emigration. Ireland was then a part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and later the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. The island was partitioned in 1921, with the Irish Free State gaining independence as a dominion, while Northern Ireland remained part of the United Kingdom. The Irish Free State became a republic in 1937, and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland became the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland
